Wallace Wins

A good month for architects Douglas Wallace, who last month picked up a big international award (at the Retail Design Institute Awards in New York) for their work on two Dublin stores.

One in particular was of note – first place in the convenience store category for the design of the Go Fresh retail convenience store in Tara Street station in Dublin. The store, located under the barrel of a railway bridge, has a 'keyhole' entrance which was lauded by the judges. The other award was for work with the Peter Mark hair salon company.
