

NAA Ltd

This 39 room hotel was designed by Cork-based Coughlan Dekeyser Associates. Once entering the hotel, one is immersed into a lobby drowned in natural light with stunning views over Ardmore Bay. The interiors and façade were designed by interior architect Gary Cohn of Douglas Wallace Architects whose design spec was to draw the landscape inwards. Vast large windows exploiting the incredible views and unique design features only lend to enhance the overall ambience of introducing the "outside" inside. A feature wall in the leisure centre uses panels of homogenously sculptured MDF (Art Diffusion by Interlam, www.interlam-design.com) manufactured from Extira, exterior grade MDF and finished in a suitable moisture resistant finish. A five panel pattern was selected and working with program designers in Interlam US, the distributors, NAA Ltd achieved an overall panel pattern by reflecting or mirroring the design to cover the area required. It has been used here as a backdrop to a seating area at the pool, mirroring the ripples from the bay. The project seeks to reflect the sea and surrounding exterior elements throughout the entire building.
